

All across the Underdark our people are celebrating.

The remnants of the dark elven empire, now calling themselves the Tarantula's, are scurrying from our armies. Just a few short weeks ago, our forces faced off against several of the Tarantulas pitiful armies at the city of Rivenrock. Here, we dealt them a deadly blow, and took a strong step forward in our quest of revenge

The once mighty army of the Paladins of Lolth stands decimated. In the glorious memory of Lord K'hafran we can be proud of the actions of the few that took that city, and the devastation they wrought against the betrayers.

The pitiful forces of the Tarantula's scrambled to defend the remains of the once beautiful city, and during this distraction, we sent our emissaries into Do'bluth. We negotiated with the demons that call the city home, they too have felt the oppression and betrayal that we experienced and with our help they would finally have the power they needed to push against their masters. As we began our assault against the pride of the Tarantulas, their glorious capital city, the Demons of Do'bluth took out the forces defending the walls, and our armies simply strolled into the city.

Celebrate my people. This war is a long way from done, but we have earned the right to celebrate, and I bid you do so, I will personally be joining you on the streets of Do'bluth, we will all celebrate together.

Pantheon In Ruins

To continue the good news edition of The Web, our spies have brought us news of a recent development within the Ancestral Pantheon of the Tarantula's.

This news comes about Kanchelsis, a descendant of Ma'azbiir Keltormiir, and a recent addition to their pantheon of ancestors.

Yet Kanchelsis, so weak and powerless allowed himself to be taken by an ancestor of the people of Lantia.

And their pantheon, so powerless to prevent the destruction of the once all powerful Dracos, were equally powerless to protect this imitation of an ancestor.

Even the Ancestral leadership of this Tarantula faction falls, as our Empress wills. It is certainly a time to celebrate.

Eye on the Underdark

We found this section in previous version of the Tarantulas little publication, and it seemed just as valid to keep it here, please allow us to announce the new hierarchy of the nation of the Underdark.

Empress Saraya Kenafin
first daughter of Lord K'hafran

High Priestess Calistra Kenafin

Lord Commander Tre'sor
formerly of the Demons of Do'bluth

We at the newly liberated The Web, wish all the very best to our new leadership. Especially to the Lord Commander Tre'sor. In recognition of his brilliant efforts at Do'bluth, he was rewarded with tactical command of all the Demonfey armies.
